AAA CHECKS HERE HELD UP

Judge, Sheriff Resume Duel Over Court Expense

Budget of $27,000 for 1936 Provides Both Farm Agents

Sheriff Incensed at $6,000 for Court and $2,500 for Jail

BOTH ARE REDUCED

Bearden Threatens to "Fill Up Jail" Unless Paid for His Work

Highlights

The adjourned term of Hempstead Quorum Court, meeting at Washington Monday, fixed the 1936 budget at $27,000, compared with $28,000 for 1935, and $31,500 for 1934.

Sheriff Jim E. Bearden and County Judge H. M. Stephens clashed again the sheriff threatening, unless paid for his criminal work, "to fill up the county jail," while the judge asked, "How come we got the meanest people in the world in Hempstead county?" to which the sheriff retorted, "I didn't say it."

The county, like the City of Hope, has had its troubles collecting "street tax." Under the law every rural male citizen under the ages of 21 and 45 must either pay $4 a year or give four days free labor on the roads. The Quorum Court, on a motion by A. C. Monts, voted unanimously to compel enforcement.

Sheriff Bearden announced that his campaign for collection of the delinquent personal tax was under way, asserting, "We proceeded against Hope business houses first, before starting on the farmers." The Quorum Court unanimously adopted a motion by A. H. Washburn endorsing the sheriff's collection campaign.

A revenue-hungry Quorum Court meeting at Washington Monday in a stormy session, heard Sheriff Jim E. Bearden and County Judge H. M. Stephens renew their battle over circuit court and jail expense.

Looking to increased revenue the justices unanimously endorsed the sheriff's campaign to collect delinquent personal taxes, but also unanimously, they endorsed the judge's budget which cut down the circuit court appropriation from $7,000 last year to $6,000 for 1936, and reduced the jail allowances from $1,000 to $2,500.

Total appropriations this year were fixed at $27,000, compared with $28,000 last year, and $31,500 in 1934. Both the county farm and home demonstration agents were provided for again this year.

Stephens and Bearden

The highlight of the court session was the debate between Judge Stephens and Sheriff Bearden. It went about like this:

"In 1934," said Judge Stephens, "Arkansas adopted a constitutional amendment forbidding counties to go in debt for current expense. Counties in debt at that time were forbidden to exceed the amount of that debt, and counties can't go in debt at that time could not go into debt."

"In 1924 Hempstead county was not in debt, and was getting by on a 4-mill county tax."

"But from 1928 on, the county began to go in debt. The county was $7,000 in debt when I took office. I undertook to pay off the debts as I found them, using much of the 1923 revenue to pay obligations incurred before that year. Meanwhile, tax collections fell off, the county taking in actual cash of about $25,000 a year."

Slot Machines in Camps Are Ousted

Deputy Constable Shipp Gives Orders to Luck and Tol-E-Tex

Slot-machines were found operating in the county, at two tourist camps just beyond the corporation line of Hope, by Allen Shipp, deputy constable of DeRoan township.

Shipp told The Star Monday night that he went to Luck's tourist camp, just west of the city line, late Monday afternoon and found three slot-machines in play in the dining room.

After dark the deputy constable paid a visit to the Tol-E-Tex camp, just east of the city, and found one machine.

Proprietors of both tourist camps told the deputy constable they would obey his order to remove the machines at once, Shipp told The Star.

Slot-machines were ousted from the City of Hope in 1930 following a newspaper campaign in which The Star gathered a dozen affidavits of commercialized gambling among children.

Administration to Seek Substitute for AAA Program

Farm Leaders to Confer January 10 to Shape New Measures

ACTIVITIES HALTED

Officials Have But Few Definite Answers to Deluge of Messages

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Farm leaders were summoned by the New Deal Tuesday to confer on shaping a program to replace the smashed AAA.

Secretary Wallace issued a call for January 10 to 11 after the ponderous AAA field machinery was brought to a full stop by the six to three Supreme court decision which demolished the AAA program.

The AAA field offices were ordered Tuesday to halt all activities. These telegraphic orders added the final brake to those Monday stopping benefit payments and tax collections.

The offices of the adjustment administration here were deluged with telegrams, long distance telephone calls from frantic field workers, from farm organization leaders and from individual farmers.

"Officials said they had but few definite answers for the countless questions."

Futrell Comments

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Governor Futrell said Tuesday that the proposed formation of 48 little AAA's in each state in the union might be constitutional, but the administration of such a farming program "would lack teeth."

Institution of such a program to replace the AAA might be rendered ineffective by the refusal or failure of states that are unsympathetic with the New Deal measures to co-operate with the program.

Wallace Pessimistic

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Fear that the passing of the AAA may result in the return of 1932 conditions for agriculture was expressed Tuesday by Secretary Wallace.

"We hope the immediate effects of the Supreme Court's decision on farm prices will not be serious," Wallace said.

No Sinking Fund for Centennial

Comptroller Smith Says Receipts Through August Are Pledged

LITTLE ROCK—Following disclosure Monday by Governor Futrell that he had suggested to the Centennial Commission that it might be possible to use part of the general revenue sinking fund to help finance the state's centennial celebration this year, state Comptroller Griffin Smith issued a statement showing that sinking fund receipts through next August are pledged to other purposes.

The governor emphasized that he was not endorsing any specific plan of providing money for the centennial and declined to comment on a new poll of the legislature to determine whether it would authorize state aid if the money could be provided without levying any new taxes, or disturbing the allocation of present levies.

Mr. Smith said it would be impossible to obtain from the general revenue sinking fund the $300,000 sought by the Centennial Commission.

Affected by 1935 Legislation

His statement reviewed creation of the sinking fund in 1933 to pay an overdraft of approximately $1,000,000 against the general revenue fund which was incurred in 1931 and 1932. He said the original debt will be liquidated in March, but that the 1935 legislature provided that an additional $187,169, erroneously paid into the general revenue fund instead of into the common school fund and equalizing fund from cigarette dealers' per cent fees between 1931 and 1933 should be repaid to those funds from the sinking fund.

He estimated that, if the sinking fund receipts continue at an average of $36,000 a month, this adjustment can be completed in August and said the sinking fund therefor is unpledged.

The comptroller said his office had planned to recommend that the sinking fund be held intact after August to be appropriated by the 1937 General Assembly for expenses of that session, "since there is no other fund from which such expenses can be paid."

Questions, Answers on Effect of Court's Decision on AAA

Confusion Sweeps Official Washington After Supreme Court's Ruling—Administration Leaders Interpret Decision as Hard Blow to New Deal

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The wildest confusion since the Supreme Court smashed NRA swept official Washington Monday night as administration leaders sought to interpret the decision holdings AAA unconstitutional.

Some of the principal questions, with the best available unofficial answers, were these:

Q. Will payments to farmers on present contracts be paid?

A. For the present, all payments have been stopped. Administration leaders hope some way will be found to meet the contracted obligations.

Q. Will the 6,500 AAA employees continue work?

A. For the present, administrative expenses have been stopped. Officials said employees will report to work Tuesday as usual, and expressed hope a substitute would be found before physical liquidation of the AAA is necessary.

Q. Does AAA have any money not coming from processing taxes?

A. Yes. Officials said $90,000,000 remains from a direct appropriation by congress, and that approximately $50,000,000 from the customs receipts fund is available.

Q. Is the entire Adjustment Administration smashed by the court's decision?

A. AAA officials believe not. Opinion was expressed that marketing agreements and licenses were not affected; likewise, authority to use money for removal of crop surpluses believed not affected.

Q. Could marketing agreements be used to control prices of major commercial crops?

A. AAA officials say marketing agreements are believed generally effective only for small crops in limited areas, such as fruits, vegetables and milk.

Q. What will happen to the $150,000,000 estimated impounded in courts in injunction suits?

A. It is believed that these funds will be returned to processors who paid them into the courts.

Q. Will processors be able to sue the government for the $975,000,000 paid to the Treasury in processing taxes?

A. The Louisiana rice millers case, involving the AAA amendments, now before the Supreme Court, will decide this question. The amendments provided that the processor could not recover unless he proved he had not passed the tax on to the consumer.

Q. Can wholesalers sue processors for return of taxes passed on to them in higher prices?

A. In part, this depends on the decision of the court in the Louisiana millers case. If the court's decision is favorable to the processors, a wholesaler could sue only if his contract with the processor had specifically provided for refund if the tax was held unconstitutional.

Q. Does this decision invalidate the Bankhead cotton act, the Kerr-Smith tobacco act and the potato act of 1935?

A. No, except in effect. These are separate acts, designed to enforce the AAA. A suit testing the Bankhead act is pending before the high court; the Kerr-Smith has been held invalid by a lower court; the potato act has not been challenged.

Q. Will big purchasers of foodstuffs be able to recover floor stocks taxes paid when AAA was begun on stocks then in possession?

A. Officials said this question had not been determined.

Q. Could a farmer sue the government for complete payment of his present contracts?

A. Not without consent of the government.

Q. What effect is the decision expected to have on food prices?

A. Officials said there probably would be no great effect immediately, since 1936 programs for wheat and hogs had aimed at nearly "normal" production.

Q. Has the AAA a substitute ready?

A. No, the decision was far more sweeping than was expected.

Q. What substitutes are under consideration?

A. Adoption of a "little AAA" for each state, financed by federal grants; payments to farmers for "proper use" of land instead of crop reduction; adoption of a domestic allotment plan.

Birthdays Ball for FDR Here Jan. 30

Annual Affair Will Be Held in Hope High School This Year

The annual birthday ball in honor of President Roosevelt will be held in the Hope High School gymnasium the night of January 30, it was announced Tuesday by Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp, who has been appointed county chairman for the second consecutive year.

Mrs. Lowthorp announced a called meeting of the executive board, to meet at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at Hope city hall, to work out details for the celebration here.

Part of the proceeds will stay in Hempstead county and will be used in the fight against infantile paralysis. The other portion will be sent to a national committee to wage war on the dreaded disease.

Third Annual Affair

WASHINGTON—Another million dollars will pour this month into the war efforts for America's offensive against infantile paralysis, childhood's most feared disease, it was indicated here recently when final reports on the 1935 Birthday Ball for the President were made public by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The reports, drawn up by Keith Morgan, treasurer of the National Committee for the Birthday Ball, showed that $1,071,000 was raised for the fund on January 30, 1935, at the second nation-wide Birthday Ball when the sum raised in 1934, when the first ball was held, and the 1936 National Committee, under the chairmanship of Colonel Henry L. Doherty, believes that an even greater total will be raised this January 30.

German Acts and Not Finance Started World War, He Says

WASHINGTON—(AP)—J. P. Morgan told the senate investigating committee Tuesday that German acts, not international finance, pushed the United States into the World War.

Planked by his senior partners, the famous banker faced questioning by senators intent on creating sentiment for legislation to curb financial dealings with warring nations.

Morgan told the senate investigators that his great banking house "turned loose" with loans to the allies in 1915 soon after President Wilson consented to it.

U. S. Program Hit

ROME—(AP)—The Italian press depicted a fresh fire at President Roosevelt's neutrality program Tuesday.

Thoroughly reliable sources disclosed that anti-American attacks had been undertaken with the full prior knowledge of the Fascist government.

Mussolini's personal organ said that Americans, whose expansion from the Atlantic to the Pacific, had "overcome difficulties of nature," should comprehend the Italian cause in Ethiopia.

Liquor Election in Randolph

POCAHONTAS, Ark.—An order was issued Monday by County Judge Joe Snodgrass calling for an election in Randolph County March 10 on the question of the sale of legal liquor. The petition, sponsored by the Rev. B. L. Willford, pastor of the First Methodist church of Pocahontas, was signed by 804 citizens, although only 60 signatures were necessary. Randolph county consistently has voted dry. It also voted dry on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Election at Batesville

BATESVILLE, Ark.—Following acceptance of a petition by the Independence County Court Monday, March 6 was set as the election date for local option of the sale of liquor in Batesville, County Judge Oscar T. Jones announced.

Woodruff County Will Vote

AUGUSTA, Ark.—March 17 was the date set Monday for the liquor election for Woodruff county. There were 35 qualified electors who signed the petition.

5,000 Community Pledges

As omens that this month's celebration which will honor President Roosevelt's fifty-fifth anniversary, will combine the two previous ones, Colonel Doherty declared that already 5,000 communities had forwarded to his committee wholehearted pledges of participation in the 1936 Birthday Ball.

In his report to the President, Mr. Morgan gave additional details of the accounting of the funds raised for the 1935 affair by 5,000 communities.

HITS 1,000 FARMERS

All AAA Transactions in State Suspended at Midnight Monday

Approximately 1,000 AAA checks, due Hempstead county farmers through payment of parity and second rentals, were held Tuesday at Hope city hall as the result of the United States Supreme court's decision Monday invalidating the AAA program.

Frank J. Hill, assistant in cotton adjustment, said that these checks amounted to approximately $14,000.

Mr. Hill announced that he had received orders to suspend all AAA activities, pending further notice. None of the checks will be delivered.

Distribution of parity and second rental checks started December 31, and about 1,200 of the checks had been delivered up to Monday when the decision by the court killed the program.

The county schedule called for distribution of the other 1,000 checks Tuesday and Wednesday—had not the AAA been declared unconstitutional, Mr. Hill said.

Hog Market Booms

CHICAGO—(AP)—The hog market continued its spectacular adjustment to the Supreme Court's decision on the AAA by scoring the sharpest advance in months early Tuesday.

With the opening asking prices of 75 cents to $1 higher by per hundred weight, the market shot upward in early rounds to the $10 level.

Cotton Breaks Sharply

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—After overnight consideration of the Supreme Court decision wiping out the AAA program, cotton futures on the New Orleans exchange broke nearly $2 per bale.

State Activities Halted

LITTLE ROCK—AAA activities in Arkansas ended at 13 Monday night under executive order from Washington which followed the United States Supreme Court's declaration that the Agricultural Adjustment Act was unconstitutional.

Officials in charge here declared that the court decision will be a "shock" to Arkansas farmers who have received near $4,000,000 for taking part in agricultural adjustment programs, and who are expected to receive an additional $3,500,000 in cotton price adjustment payments on the 1935 crop.

Telegrams from Chester Davis, national AA administrator, C. W. Warburton, director of the Agricultural Extension Service, and Cully A. Cobb, chief of the AAA Cotton Section, were received Monday night by C. C. Beall, acting assistant secretary in charge of the Agricultural Extension Service, and transmitted immediately to county agents throughout the state.

Instructions from the Washington office were to suspend all action on

Ask Allotment on Total Cultivation

Hempstead Cotton Petition to Be Signed at City Hall Saturday

A petition, one of several in the state, was launched among the justices of the peace attending Monday's session of the Quorum Court at Washington advocating the fixing of the cotton allotment the next four years on the basis of total cultivated acreage rather than cotton acreage only as at present.

State Senator John L. Wilson, who addressed the Quorum Court, and who later obtained practically all the signatures of the justices as individuals, announced that he would spend all day Saturday, January 11, at Hope city hall to complete signing up the petition.

The text of the resolution follows:

"Be It Resolved, That we, the farmers and other citizens of Hempstead county, hereby appeal to our congressmen, senators and the Secretary of Agriculture to adjust the cotton allotment for the years 1936-37-38-39 on a total cultivated acreage basis, rather than the cotton acreage basis, as has been done for the past three years."

"Be It Further Resolved, That we pledge our wholehearted support to the federal government in the program of cotton acreage control, and only ask that the basis be fair and just to all sections."

"Be It Further Resolved, That the agricultural extension division of the University of Arkansas and all county agents be requested to co-operate with us in our efforts to bring about a fair, just and equitable adjustment of the cotton allotment program."

"Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of our senators, congressmen, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the President of the United States, asking their earnest consideration, that the small hill farmer may not be driven to bankruptcy and that the hill section of the Cotton Belt be not driven to bankruptcy."

Columbia to Vote Liquor Question

February 25 Is Date Set to Vote in Local Option Election

MAGNOLIA, Ark.—(AP)—County Judge J. N. McNeese accepted Monday a referendum petition, reported signed by 46.9 per cent of the qualified electors, and fixed February 25 as the date for Columbia county's local option liquor election.

The petition bore 1,014 names. There are 2,162 qualified electors in the county. Four liquor stores are operated. Three in Magnolia and one in Waldo.

Liquor Election in Randolph

POCAHONTAS, Ark.—An order was issued Monday by County Judge Joe Snodgrass calling for an election in Randolph County March 10 on the question of the sale of legal liquor. Lessons in Law-Making

By the Associated Press

1. Seniority Is King

Seniority is important in congress. It is the first barrier confronting the new members, and there have been many bitter denunciations of its rule. But seniority remains an important factor.

The new member, for instance, applies for his office room. He gets what is left after all older members have made their selections.

He meets with it at any official dinner he attends. The new member sits near the foot of the table. Favored committee assignments go to the older members.

He encounters it in the committee room when he attends the first meeting. His place is at the foot of the table.

The chairman of the committees are the longest serving majority members. The ranking minority member of a committee is the oldest in point of service on his side.

Much legislation is written by or determined by the conferees on conference committees of the house and senate. Usually the conferees appointed are the two senior Democrats and two senior Republicans on the committees reporting out the bills in each house.

"It is an unwise performance," former Speaker Champ Clark once observed. "For any district to choose representatives at short intervals. A new congressman must begin at the foot of the class and spell up."

Tomorrow: Committees at Work.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Activity of your thyroid gland depends upon the amount of iodine you get in your food. For this reason, this mineral salt is essential to your body. It is particularly essential in the diets of growing children, and of women who are going to have babies. The amount of iodine in the human body normally is very small, less than one one-thousandth of a gram. When the thyroid gland is overactive, there is more than a normal supply of iodine in the blood. When this gland is underactive, the iodine in the blood is below normal.

To this extent, the amount of iodine in the blood is a measure of the activity of the gland. Ordinarily your body gets enough iodine in drinking water and in table salt so that you do not have to seek an additional amount through food. Certain sections of the country, however, provide glacier water to a large extent, and this water contains insufficient iodine.

Furthermore, table salt has been so refined in many places that it also is free from iodine.

To make up for this deficiency table salt can now be purchased with added iodine, thus making sure that the human body will get a sufficient amount of this substance.

Some modern table salts have added to them not only iodine, but calcium phosphate, to prevent the salt from caking or to enable it to run freely, and a little sodium carbonate to "ribelize" the iodine that has been added.

Nutritional authorities are convinced that especially prepared iodized salts of this type are most useful in human nutrition.

In addition to iodine, there are potassium and sulphur in the human body. But experts are convinced that the average American need not worry about the supply of these substances, since they are present in many foods.

If food supplies are sufficient in other ways, there will always be enough potassium and sulphur. Sodium and chlorine, which make up common salt, also are quite sufficient in the diet of the average person. There are many arguments that point to the danger of excessive sodium chloride, or table salt, and future articles will discuss the various relationships of taking of such salt to disease.

If Americans are a lawless people, a good part of the blame must go to American judges who have set the style for them. So say Louis P. Goldbert and Eleanor Levenson in "Lawless Judges," a tart and provocative book which reviews judicial failure to abide by the letter of the law.

The authors begin by coolly suggesting that the supreme court itself has been essentially lawless in assuming the right to disqualify legislation which it believes to be unconstitutional.

When a court rules that federal regulation of the interstate transportation of lottery tickets is unconstitutional, but that federal regulation of the interstate transportation of goods produced with child labor is unconstitutional—then, argue these authors, it is simply acting outside of the law.

But they soon leave the rarefied air of the supreme court and get down to humbler benches, where they find plenty of ammunition.

The use of injunctions in labor disputes, of course, judges very often follow prejudice rather than law, and they cite a dreary list of cases in which they say the judiciary has been lawless indeed.

They compile an equally impressive list in the contempt of court bracket, review such famous cases as the Sacco-Vanzetti trial, and wind up by suggesting that, of all overdue reforms, the task of putting the judiciary into place is one of the most important.

Published by the Rand School Press, the book sells for $2.50.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

This little story illustrates the power of interest when the child strikes a snag and has a hard place to get over. Daddy was taking his little girl home for Christmas, and it was a cold day, very cold.

The miles were long, and she grew very tired. There were still twenty miles to go when they reached a small town and besides it was getting dark.

"Is this the place?" she yawned. "Is this where Grandma lives?" Daddy drew the robe closer and said, "No, that they still had a little way to go."

"About as far," he said soberly. "As well, we have to ride as long as it would take you to take a bath."

"How long is that, daddy?"

"Starting a Long Bath."

He took a long breath and began, "Now let's see. First, you have to take off your shoes. Then what comes next?"

"Stockings."

"Yes, that's right. Then what?"

"My dress?"

"Right." And so after about two miles she was ready to jump into the tub. But there was the water to be drawn. And the matter to be put down; the water was too hot and had to be cooled. She could not find a wash-rag and had to get out and dry herself off and go and hunt one. Then she had to begin over again. She washed one foot and then the other. (Ten miles now.) At fifteen miles she was all ready to get dressed again.

She was hunting a dress with all the buttons on when they drew up in front of Grandma's house.

Imagination is at Premium

Daddy passed up her entertainment then to the rest. After supper and bed, he told her she had never let out a cheep after he started his game. The dreamy miles rolled away unnoticed as monotonously when the miles something diverting to hang on to.

It struck me as being rather successful for a man. What do men know of these matters? Quite a lot, I have learned. The parent with a little imagination can usually jump into a breach and save the day. It isn't a matter of "mother" or "daddy" at all, you see, but "parents" with a disposition for fun and an eye to necessity.

It takes no knowledge of psychology to do these lovely things for children. It just takes heart.

Practical indeed are some of the new preparations on the New Year's cosmetic cosmetics. This is a fine time to buy a few little extras that mean so much to your beauty.

For instance, if you have to expose your skin to cold weather and icy winds, you'll like a thick cream which is to be patted on with upward and downward strokes at night. Clean your skin carefully with soap and water (never use hot water after exposure to cold) and with cleansing cream, then apply the cold weather nourishing cream.

It's rather heavy (like vaseline), comes in an attractive jar and is pale green in color. You can remove it after some has been absorbed or, if you like, leave the surplus on while you sleep. It's good for chapped hands, wrists and knees, too.

Another good item made by a cosmetician who specializes in mineral products, including mineral bath salts and soaps, is a mud face pack. It clarifies the skin, tends to reduce large pores and often will cure minor blemishes. Put it on (about 1-2 of an inch thick) after you have cleaned face and throat, let dry, then sponge off with cotton pads which have soaked in lukewarm water. Cleanse again with soap and water or cleansing cream.

Also new is an attractive compact, the top of which resembles a Venetian blind. Containing dry rouge and a loose powder compartment, of course, this is absolutely dust-proof. It can be purchased in gold and silver and in black and white enamel combinations.

"I'm going to the library and read an hour or two," Nancy said. "Maybe when I get back I'll be able to recognize my own room."

"It is cluttered," Aunt Ellen said sympathetically. "I'll get Adella in your room right away. Maybe it won't take two hours. Your curtains are up and the rugs are down."

"Don't worry about it," Nancy said. There was a disconsolate slump to her shoulders.

"It's a long walk to the library," her aunt said. "If you'll wait awhile Agatha and Dana will be back and Dana could drive you there."

"No thanks, I'd rather walk," Nancy said.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Against the wishes of her grandmother, aristocratic Mrs. CAMERON, DANA WESTBROOK married DR. SCOTT STANLEY, a struggling young physician.

Before her marriage, rich RONALD MOORE had been in love with her. NANCY, Dana's half-sister, loves Ronald, but hides her feelings behind a disdainful attitude.

PAULA LONG'S infatuation for Scott finally proves Dana's jealousy. Mrs. Cameron uses her influence to make the separation permanent and the break widens between the young couple.

Ronnie is a loyal friend, but Dana remains disconsolate. She decides to divorce him. Scott believes Dana left him because she was tired of being poor. He becomes a partner of the city's most outstanding physician, DR. OSLOINE.

Six months after the divorce, Dana promises to marry Ronnie. She breaks the news to Nancy and is amazed by Nancy's emotional outburst, but does not understand it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLII.

DANA and Ronnie were to be married Friday. This was Wednesday, and all the things Mrs. Cameron thought should be done in honor of the occasion were in process of being accomplished.

Even though Ronnie would be in the house only that brief while when he came to take Dana away with him, the house must be groomed and shining. As it always had been for the big events of its ancient and honorable history.

Sarah, forgetting her three-score years and infirmities was superintending with an immense energy and boundless enthusiasm.

Her two aids had taken time curtains down and put them back snowy white and crisply refuted. The whine of the vacuum cleaner had been heard in every room of the big house. Soap and water and polishing fluids; dust rags and oiled mops, had come into their own again.

Sarah, in spirit, was back in the good old days, catching the contagion of her mistress' mood. Mrs. Cameron was blooming under the stimulus of becoming important again.

The doorbell punctuated the activities with exciting changes. And then some big package from a department store would arrive, to be deposited in her mistress' room by Sarah. Under no circumstances were the help to discover that Miss Dana was involved in all this preparation.

Already, there had been surmising. One of the aids had queried: "What's goin' to happen 'round here? Never saw sich going-on 'cept fer weddings."

"Taint no wedding 'tall," Sarah lied glibly. "Guess folks kin clean house good without havin' a wedding." La, you youngsters don't know what cleanin' is. When I was yo' age, you couldn't find a speck o' dust wid a microscope."

"With a 'microscope' you means," said Adella's daughter Ruby, who was taking an 'education'.

Both Dana and Nancy had moved quietly in the midst of chaos. Mrs. Cameron and Dana were shopping. Nancy had pleaded a headache and remained at home. Aunt Ellen heard her moving and

"It's a long walk to the library," her aunt said. "If you'll wait awhile Agatha and Dana will be back and Dana could drive you there."

"No thanks, I'd rather walk," Nancy said.

"You're the dumb one," Nancy flamed. "You have a complex. When you were a little boy you were always picking up pencils for girls. When you got back from college you started blinding up their aching hearts. Now that Dana's heart is more broken than anybody's heart you know, you start picking up the pieces and putting them together again."

could!" Nancy's voice was vehement. "But if I did, you'd only despise me."

"You were almost home. Impulsively, Ronnie pressed his foot down and the car passed the Cameron house in a burst of speed.

"Shoot," Ronnie said. "I haven't an idea in the world what you are driving at. But it's only fair to tell me now."

"Yes," Nancy said, as though she had arrived at a decision of some kind. "I suppose it is. Well, you asked for it, Ronnie. I hate to see you and Dana marry, because Dana doesn't love you at all. And I don't think you're really in love with her either."

"You haven't an ounce of sense in your head," Ronnie said angrily.

State Car Owners Warned, Wiseman

Revenue Commissioner Advises Car Owners to Purchase Tags Now

LITTLE ROCK — State Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman said Monday that automobile owners who are delaying purchase of 1936 licenses in the expectation that the time for obtaining them without penalty will be extended "a month or two" are due to be disappointed.

He declined to say whether any extension will be granted, but said: "I would advise car owners to buy their licenses now."

The time for acquiring 1936 tags without penalty, as fixed by law, will expire Friday. Governor Futrell has indicated that he will not attempt to extend the time by proclamation, but will leave the matter in the hands of the revenue commissioner.

Approximately 4,000 tags had been issued up to the close of business Monday and several thousand applications had been received from field representatives. Tags will be mailed to these applicants as rapidly as possible.

"Now I am informed that this business of paying off just and valid claims against the government from one year to another is all wrong. If you have more claims than you can pay in one year the law says you must just wipe them off. The county still owes about $5,000 that won't be paid. Lost $3,600 himself."

"If all of us had lived up to the Taxpayers League proposals we could have pulled the county out."

The Potter

Watch the potter at his wheel,
Busy working day by day,
In your heart do you not feel
This hand that moulds the clay?
Watch yourself the whole day through,
Working where your work is wrought,
Is this idea to you new,
That you're moulded by your thought?
Thought, the worker, self, the clay;
God the Potter is always,
He a perfect Thought outlined,
Hold this model in your mind.

Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—For all the fanfare attending its opening, the new congress is overshadowed, for the first time in modern history, by the supreme court.
Behind the white facade of the court's vast new building, nine men are working out the answers to constitutional problems of almost unprecedented gravity. In a larger sense, they are not congress, even will determine when that body is to adjourn, since upon what the court does with pending "new deal" measures depends the extent of the task to which this congress is to be put.

It is an ancient tradition that the justices keep aloof from the whirl of Washington. The strange circumstances of these days curiously make them unwitting objects now of the main spotlight. Congress takes decidedly a second place.
To the extent that this is true, the decisions of congress may not be so important, even politically, as those the court might make.
Invalidation of major "new deal" reform measures would be likely to force Roosevelt followers to some sort of public expression for constitutional amendment. More than any others organized labor and farm groups are being watched for a signal as to what might come. If, for example, the Wagner labor act were down, organized labor would be almost certain to come forward for amendment—a procedure in connection with which its leaders already have done much thinking.

Jewish Services Are Well Attended

Big Crowd Grooms Evangelists at City Hall Auditorium Monday Night

One of the largest crowds to ever hear a religious address at the city hall auditorium was present Monday night to hear Dan Rosoff speak on "From Judaism to Christianity."

The great crowd got a taste of why it is that Albert and Daniel Rosoff have smashed attendance records wherever they have been heard. The preaching of the son and the singing of the father held the audience.

The present indication is that the remaining services will tax the capacity of the auditorium particularly Thursday night when the series will be brought to a climax by the presentation of the famous "Passover Feast."

Charlotte Colburn at the piano is probably one of the few pianists in the country who can successfully handle the difficult compositions of the Rosoffs.

Services begin at 7:30 p. m. promptly.

State to Assume "Dead" Deposits

Million Dollars Lies Forgotten in Vaults of Wisconsin Banks

MADISON, Wis.—(AP)—There's a fortune of more than a million dollars hidden away in banks of Wisconsin and if the rightful owners don't claim it soon the state will.

The commonwealth, through the office of the secretary of state, already has notified all banks that they must report on accounts 20 years old or older within the next month.

After that it is planned to bring suit which will transfer the money to the state courts to swell the special school aid fund.

Accounts so affected are known as "dead" accounts, which, in most cases, the banks holding them have been unable to trace.

Disbursements as provided for, and the fees of the clerk making entries in the order book.

It is, therefore, considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that an election shall be held on the 18th day of February, 1936, within the entire limits of Hempstead County, Arkansas, for the purpose of taking the vote of the legal voters in said territory upon the proposition whether or not spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall be sold, bartered or loaned therein, and the Sheriff of Hempstead County is hereby directed to open a poll at each of the voting places within said territory on said date of February 18, 1936, at which election every person qualified to vote at each voting place for County Officers, shall be permitted to vote, and said election shall be held in accordance with the provisions of the general election laws of the state.

In order that the sense of the legal voters of said territory may be determined in said election, the ballot shall read as follows:
"For sale, barter and loan at wholesale or retail, of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in Hempstead County, Arkansas."
"Against sale, barter or loan at wholesale or retail, of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in Hempstead County, Arkansas."

Should a majority of the qualified electors voting on this question vote to prohibit the sale, barter and loan of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in said territory, then the sale, barter or loan at wholesale or retail, of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors within said territory shall be prohibited, and spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall not be sold in dispensaries, restaurants, hotels or clubs within said territory.

The Clerk of this Court shall furnish the Sheriff of Hempstead County, Arkansas, a certified copy of this order within five (5) days, who shall have this order published in some weekly newspaper published in said territory for at least two (2) weeks before the election, and shall also advertise said election by printed or written hand bills posted in some conspicuous place in each precinct within said territory, within seven (7) days after he receives a copy of this order.

of the grant, but said that Mr. Hopkins promised aid to assume normal terms in districts that have exhausted all state and local sources of revenue. The telegram said details had not been decided, but that the amount of the grant and the counties affected will be announced within a few days.

The Department of Education applied for a total of $529,880, of which approximately $422,000 would be used to pay teachers' salaries, $67,000 for bus drivers' salaries and $40,000 for janitors' salaries.

Approximately 4,580 teachers and more than 150,000 pupils will be affected by the grant, if the full amount sought is allotted to the districts.

The application for 48 Pulaski county rural schools asked for $89,100 needed to keep the schools in session through April.

Detailed information regarding the needs of more than 400 districts was sent to Washington by air mail Saturday night after Senator Robinson telegraphed Mr. Phipps that Administrator Hopkins had asked for more information concerning the financial status of needy districts.

Robert Hoffman, Columbia, S. C., cured his stammering by memorizing the entire United States Constitution of 7500 words.

Who'll Succeed Babe Ruth as Home Run King? Up to 3 Clubs

Babe Sees Battle in American League Between Detroit and Tom Yawkey's Million-Dollar Boston Red Sox

This is the third of four articles on Babe Ruth, the man baseball forgot.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

Who will succeed Babe Ruth as the major league home run king? The man isn't certain, but rather leans toward his old pal, Lou Gehrig.

"Gehrig hits to all fields," says the old Sultan of Swat. "He bunts the ball against the left field wall."

Some suspect that Jimmy Foxx, who hit 58 home runs in 1932, only two less than Ruth swatted in establishing his record in 1927, may top the Babe's mark in his happy surroundings in Boston.

Ruth disagrees.
"Foxx made most of his home runs at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, where all fences are friendly," says Ruth. "The high left field wall at Fenway Park isn't exactly in his favor."

Other candidates for the Ruthian crown are Hank Greenberg of the Detroit Tigers; Wally Berger, of the Boston Braves; Bob Johnson of the Athletics; and Hal Trosky, of the Indians.

"Gehrig, Foxx, and Berger are vicious, free-swinging hitters," explains Ruth. "None of them cooks one leg as I did, but they manage to get their bodies behind the ball just the same."

"They call Greenberg a guess hitter, but how do they account for his hitting in 170 runs last season? The next best in batting in runs accounted for 51 less."

"Bob Johnson at times hits a ball harder than any man in the game. Trosky hits in runs."

"Some of the boys suspect that Trosky was a one-year wonder, but they can't get away from the fact that in 1935 he hit in 113 runs with a batting average of .271. Spring daisies don't do that."

Ruth sees the American League race a three-way proposition with his old team, the New York Yankees, fourth instead of second, where Joe McCarthy has been content.

Babe contends that if the second half of the Boston-Philadelphia deal, conveying Roger Cramer and Eric McNair to the Red Sox, goes through, the race in the junior loop may develop into a two-club affair. Naturally, the clubs will be Detroit and Boston, the latter array backed by Tom Yawkey's millions.

Ruth likes the Cleveland club, providing Frankie Pytlak, the little catcher, returns in shape. Pytlak has been ill for two years.

"In the National League," the Great Man goes on with his analyzing, "the St. Louis Cardinal chain always has the edge."

"Branch Rickey has strengthened his catching with Brusie Osgoodowski from Columbus, who replaces Bill DeLaney, held up by the after effects of pneumonia. Brusie is one of the brightest backstop prospects to come up in years, and his acquisition further demonstrates the worth of a farm system. Cleveland and other major league clubs can't find a catcher in the minors worth a trial.

Whitehead for Parmelee
"St. Louis may be strengthened by the Whitehead-Parmelee trade. I think Bill Terry gave up too soon on Bud. The big fellow with the side arm sailer is sure to get the best of handling by Frankie Frisch."

"The Gints, too, will benefit by the trade. Whitehead is a fine second baseman. The Cards let him go because he couldn't hit a ball far enough. The North Carolinian will be a decided improvement over Hughie Critz."

"Despite the strength of these two clubs, I believe that the Cubs stand a splendid chance of repeating. The great majority of Charley Grimm's boys are young."

Ruth sees the Pirates considerably strengthened in the one department in which they were weak last season. Acquisition of Al Todd from the Phillies, in exchange for Earl Grace, has given them a catcher of major league ability, something the Bucs have lacked.

The Cincinnati Reds are building a club and gambling on youngsters. Charley Dreesen surprised the circuit last season, and may pull a bigger one this year.

Stengel Finishes Two Up
While the rest of the clubs were pulling winter trades recognized as being beneficial to them, Brooklyn and Boston pulled one that brought the prize crack of 1935 from Casey Stengel.

The Flatbush leader, after trading Al Lopez, Bobby Reis, Tony Cuccinello, and Ray Bengie, veterans, to the Braves for Ed Brandt, pet 30, and Randy Moore, another old-timer, was called to make an accounting by Brooklyn fans.

"I gave four fellows who were not doing me any good for two fellows who were not doing them any good. So I'm two up," replied the inimitable Stengel.

What's wrong with baseball? It's the major league owners and the lack of minor leagues, Ruth asserts.
Fifteen years ago there were 54 minor leagues in operation. Today there are only 21—eight D leagues, four C, two B, two A, two A-1, three AA.

The fewer the minor leagues, the fewer the major league recruits with a chance of sticking around for a spell.

NEXT: Ruth reviews his illustrious career.

Two Hempstead Negroes Paroled

Are Among 21 Other Prisoners Receiving Clemency by Penal Board

Among the 21 prisoners paroled Monday by the State Penal Board meeting in Little Rock, were two Hempstead county negroes. They are: Roosevelt Bradley, convicted on charges of burglary and grand larceny and sentenced to three years.

The other negro is Roosevelt Ferguson, convicted on a burglary charge and sentenced to four years.

AAA Checks Here

AAA programs until further notice and to notify county agents as federal employees to take charge of all production records, forms and property.

Members of state committees and boards, field representatives, county control associations and committees also were notified to discontinue work immediately and incur no expense.

County agents and assistants in cotton adjustment were instructed to cease all surrender of surplus poundage to the national cotton pool, to cease all sales from the national pool and forward final reports not later than Tuesday, and to discontinue transfer of certificate poundage. Trust agreements received in the national office and postmarked later than midnight Monday night will be suspended.

"Absolute adherence to these instructions necessary," Mr. Cobb's telegram said. All those receiving the messages were instructed by Mr. Randall to adhere rigidly to their provisions.

Effect of the national office's action will be to arrest at once all AAA activities in cotton, rice, corn-hog, wheat, tobacco and sugar cane growing.

"I gave four fellows who were not doing me any good for two fellows who were not doing them any good. So I'm two up," replied the inimitable Stengel.

ing, all of which have figured in crop adjustment programs of the state since inception of the act in 1933.

Of the total payments of $43,964,394 to Arkansas farmers, cotton producers have received $39,242,972.07, with additional cotton price adjustment payments of $3,560,000 expected.

Signers of rice contracts received $1,852,668.82.
Corn-hog producers have received $1,521,477.84; wheat farmers, $3,556,311; tobacco growers, $180 and sugar cane growers, $44.60.

Besides crop adjustment payments, Arkansas farmers received large payments for emergency sales of livestock. In 1933 they sold 32,053 pigs to the government for $133,324.87, and during the emergency drought relief cattle buying program of 1934 payments were made to Arkansas producers for 87,914 head of cattle.
